Hiring Manager/HR:

I appreciate you taking the time to read this letter and to honor that, I'll be brief. I am looking for a cybersecurity position that is either strategic in nature or one that is a senior technical role. My 30+ years of cybersecurity and engineering experience in senior positions make me well suited for such roles. And while I have held Chief Officer positions, I am not wedded to titles but prefer roles where I can be a major contributor and make a strong positive impact on the business.

I am occasionally blocked for consideration by Human Resources because I may be missing a low-level requirement. My breadth of experience and depth of capabilities are my strengths. I ask that my resume be forwarded to the personnel who can evaluate my experience against the requirements of the cybersecurity position.

As you review my resume, you'll see that I have a very diverse background and experience set showing the ability to adapt to any vertical, industry, or situation. The size of projects in which I have been a leader range from multi-billion dollar DoD projects to ground-floor, bootstrapped Bay Area startup companies.

At my last company, I was absolutely key to transforming a small DoD program support company into a regional cybersecurity powerhouse by: creating a corporate cybersecurity culture, writing winning proposals for multi-million dollar contracts, creating and leading technical teams; and creating the backoffice capability needed to support customer-facing personnel.

Thank you for your consideration of me for this position. I would like to discuss the position, my background, and the fit that I see between the two at your earliest convenience. My contact information is listed above.

I will follow-up with you shortly via phone or email.

Thank you very much,

Cameron
